THE WISDOM OF FOLLY.

A Member of the Folly Family Speaks.

FOLLYVILLE, January 9, 1884.
Editors Herald:

Sirs:—I see by your issue of the 6th ult., you published the President's message, in which he referred to the Mormons as he called them, and recommended the passage by Congress of "bill No. 2238, on the calendar, and the establishing a commission" for the government of Utah.
I see also by the same issue you published so much of the text of Henry Ward Beecher in his Thank-giving sermon as related to the Mormons, in which he called them the stink pot. Your next issue contained the bill No. 2238, and a proceeding in the Senate presented by Senator Cullom relating to Utah.
Seeing these, and thinking them worth preserving, I cut them out and put them in my scrap book. I then searched for a few other worthy matters of past times to make the connection, but not finding them readily I concluded to write them down according to my memory and request you to publish them so that I can preserve them.

In 1855, when many of the good citizens of the United States were assembled in Chicago to nominate candidates for the Executive department of the government, they referring to slavery and the Mormons, called them twin relics of barbarism, and in substance declared that the twin relics must die. In 1880, Mr. Stephen A. Douglas, who until that time was recognized as a very able statesman, referring to the Mormons in a campaign speech, called them a loathsome ulcer and said they must be wiped out.
In the winter of 1881-2, when the Edmunds bill, which ultimately passed, was under consideration, some of the eastern papers, referring to the Mormons, called them a stench. Now, Mr. Editor, you know the Folly family, a very numerous branch of the human species. You must have read much and observed much concerning this family. In it they have always kept pace in numbers with the Wiseman family and the Rights family, and when their stock have dwindled in numbers their sons have married the daughters of this family, but they have refused to permit their daughters to marry into the Folly family.
Not they. They, it is true, have tried to convert them to their modes and manner of life, but up to this time there has been a complete success, which is deeply regretted. The Folly family have always had among them persons so unlearned that they could not learn the difference between barbarism and civilization, so it is not surprising that relics of barbarism should be found in that family when their manner of life shall be scrutinized thoroughly by the wise man of the Wiseman family, and they be judged by the Rights family. It may turn out that barbarism and loathsome evils are found to exist. You know the Folly family are dependant on the Wiseman family for their family physicians. Those physicians use every imaginable kind of medicine.
They sometimes prescribe drawing near to God with their lips and with their mouths honoring him, even though their hearts are far from him. This medicine is sometimes taken by these patients, they not knowing any better. This always causes in them loathsome ulcers. These loathsome ulcers may cause a stink. They make them stink. To get rid of this stink they must have, I repeat they must have, stink pots and put the stink into the stink pots. A great family must have a great house, and in a great house there must be many vessels, some to honor and some to dishonor. Many members of the Folly family have struggled and struggled and struggled again to become vessels of honor until they are almost discouraged. It now requires a very great effort to keep instilled in their minds the lesson long since thought them by the Wiseman family, that if at first you do not succeed try, try again.

Yours truly,
A FOLLY.

Newman and "Salt Laker."

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 9, 1884.

Editors Herald:

A few words with your correspondent, "Salt Laker," who, under date of the 5th inst., makes answer to Dr. Newman's argument against polygamy.

The Dr.'s argument is that if one man has twenty-five wives twenty-four other men must live wifeless, inasmuch as the numbers of existing men and women are substantially equal, and thereby the twenty-four men are defrauded of natural rights. The answer is that a man's right to a wife is on a par with his right to land, horses, cows, sheep, pigs, or chickens.

Can "Salt Laker" be in earnest in advancing such a proposition?
Does the family relation rest on no other basis than the possession of property does? A man inherits property, acquires it by gift, by work, by discovery, by speculation, by swindling and sometimes by larceny. He loses it by misfortune, by dissipation, by speculation, by identity. Are wives to be acquired or held on such tenure? In other words, is the commonly accepted doctrine, I mean generally accepted by thoughtful men and women, that the family relation is the groundwork of social virtue and human improvement, a mere fallacy and delusion? And does not the family relation, for its influence, depend chiefly upon the harmony, affection, respect and confidence existing between the husband and wife? Where these are lacking is not the result apparent in the debased character of the children?

Does the defense of polygamy require that the very beginning of the family relation, the union of husband and wife, as well as its continuance, shall be the reward of wealth as against poverty, of strength as against weakness, of swindling as against integrity? And does the view taken by "Salt Laker" lead to aught else? and should this view of "Salt Laker" come to be generally accepted and acted upon, and wives looked upon as luxuries to be enjoyed by the rich and strong only, and classed as acquisitions with horses, cows, sheep and pigs, would the family relations under such new regime be purer and more efficient for good than now? T.
